Many students have mastered the finer parts of English grammar but are at a lost when it comes to conversing with native speakers. In actuality, the only method to improve your speaking fluency is to do a lot of listening and then practice. The following are some pointers to help you improve your English speaking abilities. Keep in mind that listening is the basis for speaking! If you want to practice speaking as well, here are some tips on how to enhance your English speaking abilities [1].

Find someone who speaks English with you. It's important to find native speakers to practice with. Students who live in areas where English is commonly spoken by local people may be able to find opportunities to talk to them and get to know their city. Joining a club or a volunteer organization can be a great way to get to know people personally. Another option is enrolling yourself to online classes that offer English-related courses like IELTS preparation course. If that's not an option, consider hiring a private tutor. Many students use Skype and Google Hangouts to find and meet with tutors. A lot of students find and meet with tutors online via tools like Skype or Google Hangouts [2].

Make sure to speak as well as listen. When practicing with a native speaker, try to balance your speaking and listening. It's a good idea to prepare questions in advance so that the conversation will flow back and forth. If the person you are talking to asks you a question and you answer long, you can always return the question to your person by asking "What do you think?" Or "How about you?"

Record your interview practice. Recording is a convenient way to get the most out of a conversation with a native speaker. When you listen again, you can evaluate your own pronunciation and notice areas where you need to improve. You can also read the content of the conversation, take notes, and prepare for the next meeting.

Write in English extensively. Another way to improve your English speaking skills is to immerse yourself in English as much as possible. Watch movies or TV in English, with subtitles if you need them, and watch the same programs over and over. Most people find that they are understanding more each time. Listening helps you better understand the rhythms and intonations of English. Once the sounds are familiar, try to imitate them.

Practice with music and movies. Listen to music in English, and sing along. Music is one of the best tools for learning how to pronounce correctly. Listening to songs can help you remember vocabulary and phrases, and it will help you improve your pronunciation of English in a more natural way [3]. By unconsciously imitating the singer, you'll learn to pronounce phrases the way native speakers do. One good song for ESL or EFL students is "Tom's Diner" by Suzanne Vega because it uses simple language to describe everyday scenes and actions. Movies are a better choice for learning English. You will learn vocabulary, idioms, slang, pronunciation, and listening by watching movies. Be sure to use my movie technique when you do this!

Reading out loud is a great way to practice speaking when there are no conversation partners available [4,5]. Reading aloud gives you an opportunity to read without worrying about coming up with words. Material that you can understand is important to be able to learn and practice with. Some students find videos online that have transcripts. Many TED talks, for example, include word-for-word transcripts of some of the speaker's ideas. You can check your pronunciation by listening to how someone says something [6].

Tell yourself or think to yourself things that you want to happen. Saying your thoughts out loud or narrating your actions (“I am drinking coffee, and now I’m going to open my book”) can be a very effective way to practice spoken English. When you speak aloud, you can practice translating your thoughts into spoken words. Practicing alone is also a low-pressure way to practice, since no one will hear your mistakes [7, P.3761].
